

Turf wars

by Jennaye Derge

Outdoor activities don't stop just because it's winter, and the Durango Football Club makes sure of that. Beginning in January and running till spring every year, teams of hardcore soccer enthusiasts get together every Tuesday and Thursday night to cut grass at "The Turf," an indoor sports arena in Bodo Park. This year, six teams will duke it out until the end of March, when they will celebrate the end of the season – and also the end of time at "The Turf," as the arena will be converted into a new gymnastics venue. The footballers hope to find a new place for next winter, but until then, they have a season of sunshine and real grass to look forward to.

Fancy footwork keeps the ball in possession for the red team.

Hustling for possession.

Goal!!!!
