

Bottoms Up

by Jennaye Derge

The 17th annual San Juan Brewfest went off without a hitch at Buckley Park last Saturday. The sold-out event featured 53 breweries and distilleries offering tasty craft brews and spirits from near and far, including breweries from just over the hill (Telluride) to those just over the continent (Alaska). And of course, all the local players were there, too. For four hours, thousands sipped, slugged and swilled to their heart's content (and then some) while catching up with friends and listening to live music. So, here's to nursing that aching head and doing it all again next year.

Thirsty folks packed Buckley Park on Saturday for the 17th annual San Juan Brewfest.

The guys from Telluride Brewing Co. serve up brews and smiles.

Nelson, the bass player for the headlining band, the Dreamers, from Brooklyn, shows the crowd how its done in the big city.

Cheers to beers!
