

Oh yeah.

Snow Plowed

by Steve Egiroire

Things are looking good, folks. With recent winter storms favoring our slice of the Rockies, snow is stacking up, and conditions are looking just dandy for holiday schralping. One can't help but notice the palpable buzz around town as local ski areas open for the season and rumors of waist deep powder in the backcountry begin to circulate. Here's a look as folks gearing up for what we can only hope is the beginning of a good ol' fashioned average snow year.

Ski Barn's Jake Holland scrapes a freshly waxed pair of boards.

Pine Needle Mountaineering's expert boot fitter, Josh Williams, helps Rob Gowler slip into something a little more comfortable.

Not too shabby.