

Go Team, Go!

by Jennaye Derge

Sunday: a day for rest, a day of worship, and a day for football. It's about this time every year that Sundays seem to get more intense for those die-hard football fans, and more intriguing for us fair-weather types who catch the bug. Playoff season is upon us, and while many of us yell, scream and curse at bad calls, missteps and butterfingers, we will continue to forge on, season after season. Maybe it won't be our home team we are cheering for, but come Superbowl Sunday, it's game on.

Ben Bettis creates a future fan out of daughter, Riley, 9 months.

Brothers Mike Basley, left, and Howie Basley watch a playoff game with the quintessential pint of beer and matching Wisco pride.

A bar full of fans at BREW cheer for the Broncos – mostly.
