

Spring Break

by Steve Eginolre

Not that it hasn't been spring-like all winter long, but considering that we're now less than a month away from the actual equinox, dry-land endeavors are fast taking over the recreation scene here in sunny Durango, Colorado. From bikes to sunbathers along the Animas, the enthusiasm for warm weather is in hot pursuit. Here's a look:

Max Schon enjoys the sunny cliffs of East Animas.

Rosa Malloy-Post heads up to Horse Gulch for an afternoon of dry trails in her new hand-powered rig.

Crocus flowers emerge from the frosty soil.

Connor Hodge speeds along the BMX track.

A furry companion leads the way into Horse Gulch for a hike.
